Odin Security Review

A measurable internal security review, based on generally accepted standards, can provide your organization a basis to justify current and future critical security initiatives.

Odin Enterprises has developed a proprietary diagnostic tool designed to address the key components of a comprehensive security program. These key components are an aggregation of existing industry standards, supplemented with best practices identified by Odin Enterprises.

Odin Security Review helps to prioritize an organization's security-related decisions from a return on investment perspective, which does the following:

- ✓ Measures current security preparedness level
- ✓ Assesses preparedness against a model security program
- ✓ Establishes a baseline, and sets up process improvement metrics to ensure the best possible return on the resources invested in security

Benefits

Actionable with immediate, quantifiable results

Commands a full-spectrum consideration across the key elements of an effective security program

Reveals where an organization has been and where it is heading with regard to its security status

Offers leadership a snapshot of the organization's current state of security readiness

The Odin Security Review is completed during an in-depth telephone interview with an Odin security specialist. Questions are designed to capture specific, high-level information as it relates to security in the workplace. Odin then produces a detailed analysis and report of the results and presents the findings to you and your team. Quantitative measurements resulting from this security review will help your organization measure various security initiatives associated with preparedness.

Our internal security review consists of a series of questions across the following key security-related areas:

Risk

Training and Awareness

Physical Security Controls

Intellectual Property Exposure

Behaviors of Concern

Emergency and Incident Response

Social Media Threat Monitoring
